STATE PROBE OF MINE DISASTER NOW UNDER WAY

Deep Recesses of Kinloch Mine Hunted; Three Bodies Taken

100 RESCUE WORKERS

Exact Extent of Damage Cannot Yet Be Ascertained

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Feb. 22.—(INS)—While 100 rescue workers from all parts of Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Eastern Ohio probed the deep recesses of the Kinloch Mine of the Valley Camp Coal Company, near here, and an adjoining mine for 9 undiscovered bodies, the State today opened an investigation of the mine disaster which claimed the lives of 12 miners.

Rescue workers, under the direction of the U. S. Bureau of Mines which has two rescue cars here, expect to locate the bodies of seven men in the Kinloch Mine today. It was there that the explosion occurred late Monday night.

In the adjoining mine of the Valley Brick Company they are searching for two more bodies of miners overcome when deadly gasses from the Kinloch Mine spread to the nearby shaft.

State mine authorities, meantime, questioned the nine miners who escaped. Three of these were overcome by gas but they have recovered from the experience and are aiding authorities to determine the cause of the explosion.

Three bodies have been taken from the Kinloch mine and no hope is held for the seven others known to be in there as the black damp following the blast would have been too much for them to withstand until now.

Rescuers have reached the bodies of the two other victims in the Brick Company's mine, but they were so far back in the workings and the rescuers so exhausted from working in the gas-filled chambers that they have not been able to remove them yet.

W. W. Beck and Louis Venzel, both of Valley Heights, are the miners whose bodies are still in the Brick Company mine. They were the first of five miners to go into the mine after the nearby explosion. Three miners who followed them escaped.

Following are the men still in the Kinloch mine: John Poole, John Clark, Negro; Harley Bell, Negro; William Ivory, Negro, Wes Blackman, Negro; Andres Streter, Negro, and Charles Wise. The bodies of Thomas Burfoot, foreman; William Casey and Kenzie Nice have been taken out.

Fans are at work clearing the mine of the black damp. As soon as the work is finished T. H. Thompson, of the State Bureau of Mines, said the pit would be cleared of wreckage. Until then the exact extent of damage to the mine cannot be ascertained.

WASHINGTON'S EARLY MANHOOD

No Mere Pleasure-Loving Youth, His Earlier Career of Solid Achievement Foreshadowed the Greatness of Later Years

The following is taken from the February issue of the National Republic:

By H. O. Bishop

A few historians of the modern jazz schools seem to possess some of the instincts of a certain bird that is the most graceful creature of the air and the flithest winged thing that trods land. I refer to the buzzard. To this bird nothing that is not putrid is of interest. It is not interested in anything pure, sweet and wholesome. This flock of literary buzzards take especial pride in trying to belittle and besmirch the character and accomplishments of men of the Revolutionary War period of our country, particularly

George Washington. They would have us believe that, aside from "a few lucky breaks" in the Revolution Washington spent his other years in riotous and frivolous living. And the unfortunate phase of this ghoulish muck-raking is that there are those who read and believe the writers who engage in it. Washington was always doing worth-while things from boyhood to old age. By the time he was twenty-seven he had seen more military service, and made a finer name for himself in civil life than most men following similar careers have been able to do in sixty or seventy years. His present-day smart-aleck critics could not comprehend, much less duplicate a small fraction of his achievements even as a youth.

At sixteen Washington entered upon the active career of a surveyor. He was employed by William Fairfax. The Alleghenies and the valleys between, in Virginia, were, in those days endless forests inhabited by wild beasts and Indians. Surveying was no picnic. It was the hardest kind of work. It required the husky swinging of an axe in cutting down trees; the swimming of bridgeless streams; sleeping on the ground with a saddle or a stone for a pillow; a blanket for a mattress, and the stars for a lantern. Food was obtained by shooting deer, bear and birds. This sort of work was continued for three years. William and Mary College, of Williamsburg, Va., duly commissioned Washington a surveyor, which entitled his surveys to be placed on record in the county clerk's office. It was only during a brief time in mid-winter that he found time to go home and help

SUIT FOR $75,000 IN DAMAGES IS STARTED

Philadelphian Claims Eddington Man Stole Wife's Affection

PARTED LAST DECEMBER

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 22.—Claiming that his wife's love has been stolen by another man, Walter Badowski, of 3035 Kensington avenue, Philadelphia, a tailor, has started suit in the court of Common Pleas of Bucks county against Walter Andruskiewicz, of Edgington, Bucks county, for $75,000 damages. Andruskiewicz is said to be a wealthy hotel and apartment house owner with business interests in Philadelphia.

Suit was filed by Webster Achey, of Doylestown, attorney for Badowski. Criminal prosecutions against Andruskiewicz and Mrs. Anna Badowski are listed among the cases to be tried at the present term of criminal court of Bucks county. The plaintiff's statement of claim in the heart balm suit was filed yesterday by Mr. Achey.

Badowski avers in the statement of claim that he is the lawful wedded husband of Anna Badowski, having been married to her on May 20, 1914, in Camden, N. J. They have two children, John, 12, and Eleanor, 10. They lived in happiness, the statement further avers, at their Kensington avenue home in Philadelphia, until certain grievances arose about December 10, 1927. Up until that time the plaintiff avers, he had always "enjoyed the respect and love of his wife and believed her to be faithful to him and a devoted mother to their children."

During December, 1927, the plaintiff charges that his wife, Anna, and Walter Andruskiewicz, the defendant, met in secret, resulting in a love affair that won the affections of Mrs. Badowski for Walter Andruskiewicz. As a result, Mrs. Badowski's affections were alienated, it is claimed.

The plaintiff further avers that Andruskiewicz, contriving and wrongfully, wickedly and unjustly intending to injure Badowski, and to deprive him of the comfort, fellowship, society, love and assistance of his wife, Andruskiewicz subtly and maliciously so influenced Mrs. Badowski that she began to show signs of displeasure with her husband, so that she became inattentive to her domestic affairs, leaving her home in Philadelphia, and going to Edgington to live with Andruskiewicz.

Badowski avers that the defendant gave his wife beautiful jewelry, including a valuable diamond ring, that he was unable to give her because of his financial standing.

SERVICE AT ST. JAMES'S

There will be an Ash Wednesday service at St. James's Episcopal Church this evening at 7:45 o'clock. H. Foote will be in charge.

COUNTY SCOUTS TO VISIT PHILA. CAMPOREE

Executive Board Provides For Furnishing Tickets Free To Troop Members

NOTICES TO BE SENT

By special action of the Executive Board all Bucks County Scout Troops are going to be given free tickets to attend the Philadelphia Scout Camporee at the Commercial Museum, Philadelphia. The Board approves an expenditure not to exceed $150.

The value of the Camporee lies in the opportunity the Scouts will have in seeing nearly all of the 76 Merit Badge requirements being actually worked with a complete demonstration of finished work, and perhaps the greatest of all will be the pageant portraying the beginning of camping down to the present time and even going into the future. Scout Troops will receive special notice this week as to how they can secure their tickets.

All troops in the Bucks County Council have received entry blanks, list of activities, and rules for competition for scout meets which are going to be held in the four districts with a final county championship meet to be held at Perkasee on April 14th. The events that will be a part of the contest are knot tying, first-aid projects, flint and steel fire building, barbel tilt, semaphore signaling, water boiling, antelope race, compass trail, dressing race, judging, skin-the-snake and an exhibition drill. The district meets will be held the last four Saturday afternoons of March. The time and place will be announced in this paper later.

Pamphlets have gone out this week to all organizations, and many individuals.

Auditor General Martin Tells Of Problems To Be Put To Voters at Nov. Election

DISCUSSES RESOURCES

(Special to Courier)

HARRISBURG, Feb. 22.—Addressing Pennsylvania bankers, who held a conference here today, with the opening session this morning, Auditor General Edward Martin, who recently announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for State Treasurer, dwelt upon some of the problems of financing proposed improvements in the State which will be put before the voters for their consideration next fall.

In opening his address, General Martin dwelt upon the great resources of Pennsylvania, its wonderful record of achievement, its rapid development, and its position of prominence.

Discussing the increased cost of government in Pennsylvania, he spoke

Anderson was to have extended the address of welcome but is away from town and could not attend. Mr. Schmidt, who besides being the head of Borough Council is also a director of The Farmers National Bank here, told the bankers that he was glad of the opportunity to greet them and that the Borough felt honored in having them assemble here.

Thomas Scott, cashier of The Farmers National Bank, who is the retiring president of the County Association, replied to the welcoming address in a most fitting manner.

The bankers at the conclusion of their business meeting will inspect the municipal building, be conducted on a short auto tour of the town so that they may have an opportunity to view the growth and expansion of the borough; its industrial activities and municipal improvements and partake of a banquet in the Elks' Home.

Mr. Schmidt welcoming the visitors this morning said:

"Insofar as I have been able to learn, this is the first bankers' convention that has ever been held within our borough. It is indeed a very great honor to have such a distinguished gathering of representative bankers of our county assembled in our midst, and we trust that before you leave we may have an opportunity to show you how this section of Bucks County has endeavored to live up to the high standard of civic betterment, for which our entire county is so justly noted."

"In the name of the people of Bristol it affords me the greatest pleasure to extend a most cordial welcome—Gentlemen, the town is yours."

Replying, Mr. Scott spoke as follows:

"We bankers of Bucks County, accept with great pleasure, the cordial welcome tendered us by President Schmidt, and desire to express our appreciation of the opportunity extended us to meet in a section of our own home county, so replete with the traditions, and so closely interwoven with the early history and development of this great Commonwealth. We will agree to discount everything

BRISTOL HIGH LOSES TO TEMPLE CAGE FIVE

Fourth Defeat of Season For The Local H. S. Quintet

DISCUSSES RESOURCES

(Special to Courier)

Bristol High School lost their fourth game of the season last night when they were downed by the fast moving Temple High, 24 to 14. The game was played on the latter's floor.

From the opening tap-off Temple jumped into the lead and held that position until the end of the game. Bristol could not get started last night and missed many good shots which might have been made had Bristol been familiar with the Temple floor.

Wright and Strumfels divided the scoring honors for Bristol with six points apiece. De Risi played a wonderful game at guard. Lipschultz and Dunn were high scorers for the Cherry and White clan. Coach Townsend expects to put the local boys through hard scrimmage today and tomorrow in preparation for their home tilt with Ambler this Friday. Ambler was the first team to defeat Bristol High.

PAUL DEAK, 27, IS NAME GIVEN BY FUGITIVE

Was Acting Suspiciously In Vicinity of Schmidt's Greenhouses

IS IN HOSPITAL HERE

Bullet Enters Man's Left Arm And Victim Is Found In The Underbrush

Chief of Police John J. McGuckin shot a man last night who refused to halt after being commanded to do so several times. The bullet entered the fugitive's left arm but did not enter the body. The man is in the Harriman Hospital and it is said that his condition is not serious.

The fugitive gives the name of Paul Deak, 27, white. His present address is the bunk houses of the P. R. R. labor camp along the Highway at South Bristol. He is employed there as a cook.

According to the police it was about 10:30 when Jacob C. Schmidt, president of Borough Council, telephoned for the police to come to the vicinity of his greenhouses and arrest a man who was acting suspiciously. The one under suspicion was caught in the automobile of John Ennis, 623 Maple street, and when approached by Ennis fled from the car, taking shelter back of Schmidt's greenhouses.

Chief McGuckin and Officer Phillips answered the call and Phillips went in back of the greenhouses, while McGuckin circled the outside. The man keeping an eye on Phillips ran from shelter back of the greenhouses into the underbrush on the opposite side of Otter street. McGuckin saw him and ordered him to halt, but he kept on running. McGuckin shot and the man dropped into the underbrush.

Chief McGuckin and Phillips searched the underbrush and found Deak lying on the ground. The officers took the wounded man to the Harriman Hospital where he is being treated.

The police officers have been on the alert for the persons who have been committing petty thieving here during the past two months and when they received the call last night they were determined to get any individual acting in a suspicious manner.

THE THIRD CONFERENCE ON THE CAUSE AND CURE OF WAR

Keynote is Arbitration as a Substitute for War

The Third National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, held in Washington January 15 to 19, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, brought together a body of six hundred women, the majority of whom were well informed on the problems under discussion and prepared to take intelligent action. The conference, like the earlier ones, was called by nine national women's organizations, including in their membership 10,000,000 women. These are the American Association of University Women, Council of Women for Home Missions, Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America, General Federation of Women's Clubs, National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, National Council of Jewish Women, National League of Women Voters, National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and National Women's Trade Union League.

The program of the third conference differed in some respects from the others, stressing less the formal speeches and giving over several sessions to an open-forum discussion among the delegates themselves. A novel feature was the introduction of two round-table discussions, one on the Cause and Cure of War, one on the Foreign Policy of the United States, participated in by such experts as Mrs. James T. Shotwell, Philip Marshall Brown, Stephen P. Duggan, and John H. Latane, and others seated on a platform with the delegates as interested audience. It was, as Mrs. Catt announced, such a round table as had never been held before anywhere in the world, but it was regarded as a great success.

—Mrs. Michael Gordon, of 340 Harrison street, who has been quite ill with an attack of tonsillitis, is able to be about again.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart Woodruff, of 235 Madison street; Mrs. Mary L. Gilkeson and Miss Ellen Gilkeson, of 920 Radcliffe street; and Mrs. Ellis E. Ratcliffe, of 342 Jefferson avenue, motored to Oak Lane yesterday and visited Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff's nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Wynnefield Smith, of Woolston Road.

—Mrs. M. L. Callanan, of Cedar street, was hostess to the Tuesday evening "500" card club this week.

—Miss Elizabeth Wilson, of Tullytown, was an overnight guest Saturday at the home of Miss Elsie Heaton, of Washington street.

—Mrs. Warren Thompson and William Thompson, of Radcliffe street, will spend Wednesday in New York City, sightseeing.

—Mr. Vincent Dugan, of New York City, was the guest at the home of Mrs. Catharine Boyle, of Bath street, on Sunday.

—Mr. Elmer Houser, of Bath Road, has been suffering with gripe at his home for the past several days.

Mrs. Catt's opening speech on "The Status of War vs. Peace" was reflected in the major resolution adopted by the conference, looking towards future activity. Though she warned her audience that she was treading on controversial ground, she declared that she had reached certain conclusions, which were that war as an institution can be abolished by civilized nations when the people will; that the only way to treat the problem of war is to isolate it and treat it by itself, irrespective of causes—wars today have no causes, only excuses; that the complicated problems about which men write books can not be settled with guns, but call for statesmen; and that the only possible substitutes for war are compacts among civilized nations to proscribe war as between themselves and to find peaceful means for settlement.—(Adv.)

his mother in the management of her farm.

So well was he known throughout the colony, and so highly was his ability and judgment looked upon, that at the age of nineteen he was appointed an adjutant-general, with the rank of major, to inspect and exercise the militia in one of the districts in which Virginia was divided as a precaution against the French encroachments and the Indian depredations. Scarcely had he gotten this work under way, when he was obliged to relinquish it in order to accompany his brother Lawrence to the West Indies for the benefit of this older brother's health. He was gone four months, and while there was stricken with smallpox, the marks of which he carried to his grave. Lawrence returned home to die. He named George as one of his executors, a heavy responsibility for the youth.

Governor Dinwiddie, upon hearing of his return, renewed his appointment as adjutant-general and placed him in charge of one of the grand military divisions of the colony. He entered upon this work of military preparation with great vigor. He realized that trouble was imminent between England and France. French posts were being erected on the Ohio for the purpose of holding the English settlements to the eastward of the Alleghenies. France proposed to help herself to the remainder of the continent.

Governor Dinwiddie secured permission from the British ministry to send a commissioner to the French officer in charge of the Ohio posts and bluntly ask him by what authority the king's dominions were being invaded, and what their future program in that direction might be. It was a mission that few men were capable of handling. Bravery, hardships, and diplomacy were involved. Dinwiddie sent for Washington—then a young man of twenty-one—and asked him to attempt the perilous task.

Without the least hesitation Washington agreed to do it. In November, 1753, he set out from Williamsburg, then the capital of the state, on the journey aggregating six hundred miles over the mountains and through a virgin wilderness. He had many narrow escapes from the Indians, and from a treacherous guide, and on the return trip was spilled into the icy waters of the Allegheny River while crossing that stream on a little raft made from old tree trunks along the bank. He came back in a little less than two months with the information he had been sent to get.

Never in all the history of America has a twenty-one-year-old boy accomplished such a dangerous mission. In writing of this phase of Washington's life, Washington Irving says: "From that moment he was the rising hope of Virginia."

Governor Dinwiddie now increased the colonial forces and made Washington a lieutenant-colonel of a regiment, with Joshua Fry, noted Oxford scholar as colonel. An expedition was started westward. The sudden death of Fry placed the entire command upon young Washington. The subsequent fight at Great Meadows is well known in history. Washington, at Fort Necessity, against vastly superior numbers, held his ground from eleven in the morning until eight at night, when the French asked for a parley. A capitulation ensued which in every way was honorable to Washington as translated and read to him. When printed, however, it read differently. Phrasing had been inserted that Washington would not have agreed to.

Washington did not relish the plan of Governor Dinwiddie's re-organization of the militia, and tendered his resignation. After visiting his mother, he returned to his home at Mount Vernon. Governor Sharpe, of Maryland, commander-in-chief of the British forces invited him to return to the army, but the terms not being considered fair, he declined the proffer.

And now came General Braddock upon the scene. He came over from England with two regiments of regulars and was going to crush the enemy like a locomotive running over a hill of ants. He was the "Great I Am" who knew it all. Washington joined his expedition as a volunteer aide. On the march across the country and during the ill-fated battle he tried to tell Braddock that fighting Indians and French was altogether different from the kind of warfare that he had been accustomed to in Europe. But the head-strong general insisted upon having his own way. As a result his army was ambushed, as Washington had predicted, and most of the soldiers were slaughtered, including Braddock and every mounted officer except the young American.

Washington's conduct on this occasion was most heroic, and he was given unstinted praise by the British. In a letter to his brother he said: "By the all-powerful dispensation of providence I have been protected beyond all human probability or expectations; for I had four bullets through my coat, and two horses shot under me, yet I escaped unhurt, although death was leveling my companions on every side." The chaplain having been mortally wounded, it devolved upon Washington to read the burial service when Braddock was buried the night of the battle.

A fine tribute was paid Washington by Rev. Samuel Davies in a sermon in praise of the zeal and courage of the Virginia troops. He said: "As a remarkable instance of this, I may point out to the public that heroic youth, Colonel Washington, whom I cannot but hope Providence has hitherto preserved in so signal a manner for some important service to his country." Rev. Davies some years later succeeded Jonathan Edwards as president of Princeton College.

The Virginia Legislature, realizing that trouble was liable to break out at any time, voted to raise an army of 2,000 men. Washington was placed in command of them and made his headquarters at Winchester. Here he experienced the same old trouble of precedence between provincial officers and those appointed by the king. In order to settle the problem, for once and all, he jumped on his horse and rode to Boston for a talk with Governor Shirley, then the commander-in-chief of the English forces on the American continent. This trip was made in 1756, when Washington was twenty-four. The following year he was stricken with fever, similar to the attack he had during the Braddock campaign. To a friend he wrote: "My constitution is much impaired, and nothing can retrieve it but the greatest care and the most circumspect course of life."

For a time he feared that it would be necessary to give up his military life and go home, but he stuck it out, and in November, 1758, had the pleasure of planting the British flag on the smoking ruins of Fort Duquesne, an ambition that he had long cherished. This fort was subsequently known as Fort Pitt, in honor of the English minister, afterward Lord Chatham.

Bucks County Bankers In Annual Session Here which President Schmidt may present, excepting the courtesy and sincerity embraced within his most hearty greeting.

"Those of you who attended the meeting of Group Two in Philadelphia on Lincoln's Birthday noted the size of the gathering. The gradual drifting away from the feature of personal contact, which is so much to be desired and which is to be found where the attendance is not so large. It is evident that the small congenial convention welds men together into a closer relationship; is indicative of a freer exchange of ideas, and is more productive of constructive thought. These are advantages which an association such as this possesses, and offers to those who are affiliated with it. The Group Meetings, in fact, have become so unwieldy in size as to preclude their presenting opportunities for discussion of subjects bearing upon the introduction of either innovations in laws pertaining to banking, or changes and improvements in obsolete banking practices.

"It might, in all propriety, be suggested that at Group Meetings they have the addresses printed and distributed to the members as it is really a physical impossibility, for those sitting a short distance from the speaker's desk, to hear what is being said. "That such a situation may be overcome, a move to form county associations is now spreading throughout the state and its effects cannot be other than beneficial.

"To become of real value, and in order that there may be a greater coordination of effort, our association should continue to embrace within its representative membership all of the banking institutions of the county. In that way alone it will be possible to secure a closer co-operation, with relief from methods that are induced through unhealthy competition, and as a result place banking upon the high standard which the trust and confidence of our depositors demand."

Continuing Mr. Scott said:

"One subject which has been given considerable thought and occasioned a great deal of controversy was the formation of a county credit bureau. You will recall how earnestly the introduction of such a bureau was discussed at our former meetings, and the apparent unanimous support that was accorded the proposition. To have organized such an undertaking would have involved a considerable expense upon those banks which are members of the Association, and it is a question whether it would not have eventually been found to be a burden which they would hesitate to carry. Apparently there is no argument against the real value which a County Credit Bureau possesses, but rather than involve the association in an endeavor of such great extent, it was deemed advisable to initiate a system of credit exchanges, between the banks of the county, by the introduction of a request for information which virtually produced results similar to those which might be obtained from the records of a regularly constituted bureau. The success which has been attached to this effort was not such as to lend any encouragement to further consideration of the question of attempting to establish a credit bureau in our county.

"This association has gone on record as being opposed to the payment of high rates of interest on deposits, believing that it is both unwise and unsound banking practice, and that competition which over-reaches the dictates of prudence and sanity is certain to react upon the bank which introduces it. In fact competition in banking has been responsible for such extensive increase in overhead charges that there will soon be a universal demand on the part of the banks for some measure of relief.

"That our county has shared in the general prosperity which has prevailed is evident from the very flattering statements exhibited by our banks. It would have proven most interesting to have compiled the combined capital, surplus and undivided profits, together with amount of deposits that are being held by our Bucks County banks today. A comparison made between the amounts held ten years ago and those which are held at present would no doubt show a growth that is comparable proportionately with the financial increase of our national wealth. However, we will not attempt to forestall the work of the committee on advertising and will therefore offer our

"It is with profound sorrow that we record the death of our former Treasurer, Mr. George H. Miller, who was also Treasurer of the Bucks County Trust Company, at Doylestown. Mr. Miller had served as Treasurer of our Association from its organization up to the date of his death. His genial nature and loyal companionship had so endeared him to his associates that his passing has been felt as an irreparable loss not only to this association, but also to all who were so fortunate as to have known him.

Tells Bankers About The State's Finances

of proposed bond issues for financing improvements in the future saying:

"All Pennsylvanians should give careful consideration to the question of financing improvements. There are two ways in which this may be done. One is by the use of current revenues and the other by bond issues. Bankers and business men of the state should give these matters their special attention.

"At the fall election this year, the electorate will be called upon to approve or disapprove the following bond issues: $50,000,000 for roads; $50,000,000 for welfare institutions; $25,000,000 for forests; $8,000,000 for Pennsylvania State college, and $5-

600,000 for armories, a grand total of $138,000,000.

"If all these bonds are approved and they are liquidated over a period of 39 years at the rate of 4%, it will cost the State $7,452,000 annually.

Although intimating that he was personally interested in the passing of some of the proposed issues, General Martin told the bankers that he was giving them only information as one of the officials of their State and not his opinion.

Touching upon the 1927 session of the legislature, he said:

"During the last session of the legislature there was approved for the Welfare Department for the erection of new buildings and for improvements to structures already erected the sum of $7,992,300; for the purchase of land for reforestation $1,300,000; $3,055,000 for new construction at educational plants, $1,600,000 being allocated to Pennsylvania State college, and $1,000,000 appropriated for the erection of new armories.

Commenting on these expenditures, General Martin expressed the opinion that the same amounts could be appropriated at future sessions without increased revenues.

Relative to the road bond issue, General Martin said that the cost of maintaining roads and bridges of the Commonwealth during the year ending December 31, 1926, in round numbers was $12,000,000 and that during that year the State constructed roads and bridges costing a little more than $37,000,000, a total outlay of $49,000,000. During that year the revenue for the State Highway Department less the sale of bonds, was slightly in excess of $42,000,000.

"It now seems fair to estimate the motor license fees for 1928 would amount to $26,000,000 and that the gasoline tax would yield $17,000,000 or a total of $43,000,000," said General Martin. This estimate he said did not include funds from Federal aid, local aid interests on deposits, and the like.

OVER in the bunkhouse the boys of the Bar-C outfit have Kansas City on the radio. In her Park Avenue apartment, the slim fingers of a famous actress turn the dials, and the same music leaps forth. Forty miles north of Milwaukee, Chris Jonson, the dirt farmer, is listening in on the same wave-length.

The same sort of thing is going on everywhere, all over the country, at all hours of the day and night. Folks in Los Angeles see the same movies, and ride in the same automobiles that New Yorkers enjoy. The resident of Seattle wears the same sort of clothes, eats the same brand of bacon, and lives in the same kind of house as his neighbor in Portland, Maine.

Advertising has done it. Advertising, the miracle worker, keeps everyone in the land attuned to the latest in everything. It has changed the buying habits of a nation. It is the great modern force that makes neighbors of the people of far countries, that brings the best of their customs to us, and takes ours to them.
